At this time of the year we usually start thinking of how many things we have to do to finish the present year, as well as what our goals and objectives will be for the coming year. We analyze all that happened this year, gauging how close we came to making our goals. We also think about those things we didn't get done and will put off for another year.

Increased membership and certifications was a major objective for WSO in 2018. Even though we fell short of the number of new members and new certifications we planned and hoped for, it was a good year. I mention this as we still have time during the rest of the year to bring in more members and increase our number of certified members. I ask that you check with your colleagues and associates about membership in World Safety Organization ... and maybe even think about a WSO membership as a holiday gift!

As part of the continuing campaign for more membership, I would also like to remind you again of WSO's ICAC accreditation. This makes your membership and certifications even more valuable and recognized than ever before. Use this information as you talk to others about the value of membership and certification through World Safety Organization.

I know everyone is already planning for the holidays. Safety is very important this time of the year, so let's make it a safe and happy holiday season. [CHB]

The Perry L. Ballard Membership Challenge

Ready to Rumble

As a former World Champion Boxer and as the World Safety Organization's 2017 and 2018 Safety Person of the Year, I am stepping out to challenge each Member of the World Safety Organization (WSO) to actively and energetically work to attract and recruit new members in 2019 and beyond!

I also challenge the Organization itself to become affiliated with the Occupational Safety & Health Administration:
<https://www.osha.gov/news/newsreleases/alliance>

A seemingly well-kept secret that now needs to be exposed is that the WSO is an excellent organization with first-rate, quality safety professionals among our Membership. We have a strong base of approximately 1,500 safety professionals and practitioners around the globe...my goal for the WSO is to grow membership to upwards of 5,000 members in a short amount of time.

As a Member of the WSO Board of Directors and as a practicing professional in the Safety Contracting arena, it is important to me that we each see our safety positions as the most integral positions within companies and corporations. For a company to continue to be viable and competitive, it must have employees that perform their specific work tasks in a safe and constructive environment. It is up to professional safety organizations and qualified safety professionals to instill quality safety performance in all employees.

Engr. Alfredo A. De La Rosa Jr. (Vice President-Deputy Director General; WSO Executive Action Committee; WSO Board of Directors; Director, WSO International Office for Philippines) and Perry L. Ballard (WSO Board of Directors) join forces to promote WSO membership growth and retention.

World Safety Organization members communicate with each other all over the world explaining new safety ideas and accident trends. We must continue to communicate the safety principals to enhance the safety performance of all workers.

As proud WSO Members, we need to let our former classmates and current associates and colleagues know that the World Safety Organization's Professional Certification Program is ICAC Certified and ISO/IEC 17024:2012 Compliant. We worked hard to obtain this accreditation, and we need to get the word out now how this program can benefit others. With this Accreditation, the World Safety Organization is on the move for greatness.

I humbly ask each of you to accept the challenge. Reach out and contact 10-20 potential members and explain the great things that we have going on here in the WSO. I have personally pledged to recruit 30 new active members by the end of 2019, and I'm happy to help you with your recruiting goals.

If you did not make it to the Symposium in Charleston, West Virginia, this year, you missed an excellent opportunity for networking, learning, and problem solving. Plans are already underway for our October 2019 event in Las Vegas, and it promises to be just as rewarding. I look forward to seeing you and your recruits there! [PLB]

Holiday Safety and Health in the Workplace

With the holiday season underway, people are feeling festive – including at work. But whether you’re decorating your cubicle or taking part in the office potluck, safety should always remain a top priority. Safety+Health offers the following tips to help prevent injuries while celebrating on the job.

Safe Decorating

Don’t stand on a chair to hang decorations. Use a stepladder, and make sure to read and follow the instructions and warnings on the label. And never hang decorations from fire sprinklers – they can prevent the sprinklers from operating properly. OSHA regulations state that stacked materials should never be closer than 18 inches below fire sprinklers.

Planning to string decorative lights or other electrical items in your workspace? The Electrical Safety Foundation International, a non-profit organization, states that workers should:

- Be sure that all electrical items are certified by a nationally recognized independent testing lab.
- Inspect all lights, decoration and extension cords for damage before using.
- Avoid overloading electrical outlets with too many decorations or electrical devices – they can overheat and cause a fire.
- Never try to make a three-prong plug fit into a two-prong outlet.
- Turn off all indoor and outdoor electrical decorations before leaving.
- If you’ll be using an extension cord, ESFI offers additional tips:
- Refrain from placing extension cords in high-traffic areas of your workplace, or under rugs, carpets or furniture.
- Never attempt to extend the length of an extension cord by connecting it to another extension cord.
- Never nail or staple extension cords to walls – doing so may damage existing wire insulation.
- Don’t place extension cords in walls or ceilings, as this can cause the cords to overheat.

Food Safety

If your workplace is hosting a potluck to celebrate the holidays, keep these safety tips from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in mind:

- Bringing a dish to share? Follow safe food-handling guidelines. Wash your hands before/after handling food, and serve prepared dishes on clean plates – never on dishes that previously held raw meat.
- If you’re preparing a dish ahead of time that contains meat, ensure the meat’s internal temperature reaches the proper temperature. USDA recommends cooking raw beef, pork, lamb and veal to a minimum internal temperature of 145° F; raw ground beef, pork, lamb and veal to an internal temperature of 160° F; and cooking all poultry items to a minimum internal temperature of 165° F.
- Concerned about your co-worker’s casserole? If it has been sitting out at room temperature for more than two hours, just say no. Which leads us to the next tip ...
- Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. USDA notes that hot foods should be 140° F or warmer. Use chafing dishes or slow cookers to help keep hot foods at safe temperatures. Cold foods should be 40° F or colder. Keep foods cold by placing dishes in bowls of ice or by serving in small batches and replenishing from the refrigerator as needed.

Have a co-worker with a food allergy? Don’t be a Grinch! Be mindful of their needs as you plan your office potluck.

And finally, remember that your employer’s drug and alcohol policy doesn’t take a holiday break.

Have a safe and happy holiday season!
